

Abstract:

An orthodontic appliance, particularly a bracket or a buccal tube, consists, in full or in part, of a plastic material which exhibits a water absorption capacity and in which is deposited a water-soluble, especially an antibacterial additive that restrains the formation of plaque.